

Research ethics with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Australians

Tuesday, 17th September, 2019 10am-12pm

Speakers

Professor Dennis Foley

Professor of Indigenous Entrepreneurship,
University of Canberra.

Professor Michael Martin

Professor of Statistics at the School of Finance and Applied Statistics, ANU.
Chair of the ANU Human Research Ethics Committee.

Location

The AtheNaeUm,
Ground Floor,
ANU School of Music

Registration required

Please RSVP to Sheri Kim by 30th August to be registered for this event.

E: ethics.training.projects@anu.edu.au

The ANU Centre for Social Research and Methods, and the ANU Research Services Division wish to invite you to this special seminar on Tuesday, 17th September 2019.

Research with, by and for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Australians presents many opportunities and challenges for researchers. Fundamental to Indigenous research is that “[a]t every stage, research with and about Indigenous peoples must be founded on a process of meaningful engagement and reciprocity between the researcher and Indigenous people” (AIATSIS, 2007: 3). In this seminar, Professors Foley and Martin will discuss some of the key practical and ethical issues to be considered when developing and conducting research with Indigenous Australians – particularly regarding “rights, respect and recognition; negotiation, consultation, agreement and mutual understanding; participation, collaboration and partnership; [and] benefits, outcomes and giving back” (AIATSIS, 2007: 3). Practical examples of ethical challenges for Indigenous and non- Indigenous researchers in making tangible connections with Indigenous Communities will be offered.

